

East Lake Erie Wreck Diving

Two dates available

The 1800s were a treacherous period for Great Lakes maritime disasters. There was little in the way of navigational equipment, and no early warning of unexpected storms. Many a ship met her fate in unexpected gales and heavy seas.

Today, we pay respect to the maritime history in a special way; by visiting many of the ships lost. Some are well-preserved museum pieces, some show evidence of the mighty lakes wrath, but all tell a story.

Not for Everyone

Make no mistake: These are not shallow, warm-water dives.

- The shallowest of the wrecks we visit are in 80 feet of water.
- Temperatures on the wrecks are typically in the 40s.

The Southwind

The Southwind is a 50-foot, all-aluminum vessel powered by twin turbocharged 735-horsepower Detroit Diesel engines. She's equipped with modern electronics, a 10-kilowatt diesel generator, clean and roomy head, and comfortable seating in a climate controlled cabin.

This vessel has been refitted for dive operations, and features extra-deep benches, a "fins-on" ladder and plenty of room to stow gear. All that and she can cruise at 30 knots! The Southwind is Coast Guard inspected and certified for up to 30 divers.

The Trip at a Glance

Dates Available dates include:

- Sunday, July 23
- Wednesday, August 20

Cost As follows:

- $145/Diver

Deposit As follows:

- Balance due at sign up
- No refunds unless someone takes your place

Included Price includes:

- One two-tank boat dive

You Provide Not included in price:

- Dive insurance
- All dive equipment, including two full tanks and weights
- Dive light
- Surface marker buoy (SMB)
- Crew gratuity