

The Mantas of Socorro

February 21-March 1, 2018

The Revillagigedo Archipelago possesses an absolutely unique ecosystem with many endemic plant and animal species. That is why the Archipelago is often called Mexico's Galapagos. Indeed, it is as remote, as diverse, as pristine, and, well, even less inhabited than Ecuador's pearl. This is the only place on Earth where you will — guaranteed — dive and interact with giant mantas.

Mantas swim by moving their wing-like pectoral fins. They come in very close — less than one meter! — make eye contact with you and then swim alongside you - totally on their terms.

Shark sighting is also very good at Socorro Island with common sightings of silky, Galapagos, hammerhead, whitetip and silvertip sharks. Whale sharks are usually spotted in the first half of the season and then it's the whale season when a population of 1,200 humpbacks moves into the island's waters.

Our home for this adventure is the Nautilus Under the Sea. You can read more about this amazing luxury liveaboard on our website.

The Trip at a Glance

Departs February 21, 2018

Returns March 1, 2018

Duration 7 Days/6 Nights

Cost Per diver, as follows:

- Premium Suite: $4,955
- Superior Suite: $4,201
- Stateroom: $3,770
- Quad Stateroom: $3,338

Deposit As follows:

- $750 due at signup
- +$750 due April 15
- +$1,500 due July 25
- Balance due October 15
- No refunds unless someone takes your place

Included Price includes:

- Eight days/seven nights
- All meals/non-alcoholic beverages on board
- Five and a half days of diving
- Use of tanks and weights
- Taxes and fees, except as noted below

You Provide Not included in price:

- Round-trip air fare to/from Cabo San Lucas
- Airport transfers at destination
- US$65 port fee (payable in cash on board)
- Trip insurance
- Meals while in transit
- Alcohol and incidentals
- Nitrox
- Crew gratuity