

Riviera Maya, Mexico

March 26-April 2, 2011

For those who want nothing to do with the insanity of Cancun (and who may have been to Cozumel one time too often), there is a part of Mexico few divers know about. It's the Riviera Maya, a stretch of white sandy beaches and mysterious jungles that reaches from well south of Cancun to the ruins of ancient Tulum and beyond.

This region is home to some beautiful coral reefs and abundant fish — and so many other things to see and do it's a perfect family get-away. In March we will stay at the Catalonia Riviera Maya Resort, located just north of Playa del Carmen.

In addition to a package that includes eight ocean dives, there is no shortage of things to see and do.

- You can swim, snorkel, sail or kayak.
- Shop nearby Playa del Carmen.
- Visit the ancient Mayan ruins at Tulum or Coba.
- Tour the jungle or lie on the beach.
- Explore the eco-parks of Xcaret and Xel-Ha.

Mexico's Yucatan Peninsula is famous for its crystal-clear cenotes, huge freshwater caverns decorated with trillions of stalactites and stalagmites. This trip includes two guided cenote dives, conducted by highly qualified cave divers and instructors.

Catalonia Riviera Maya Resort has all the amenities one expects, including abundant air conditioning, cable TV and direct phone service. With special prices for non-diving kids 12 and under, this is the perfect opportunity to make it a family dive vacation.
